LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, STATE OF FLORIDA,
COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.

Tallahassee, Florida.

*To His Excellency,
Park Trammell,
Governor of the State of Florida.*

Sir:—

I have the honor to submit herewith the Biennial Report of the Prison Division of the Department of Agriculture for the years 1913 and 1914.

Respectfully submitted,

W. A. McRAE,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

PREFACE.

Before the adoption of the Constitution of 1885, the Department of Agriculture was known as the "Department of Lands and Immigration." The Legislature of 1889 established the Department of Agriculture, and in that Act, May 17th, the name of this department of the State's Government was changed from the "Department of Land and Immigration" to the Department of Agriculture. This is the thirteenth Biennial Report of the Department of Agriculture and the second to be made by the present incumbent.

There are many people in the State yet who do not recognize the importance of this Department in other matters pertaining to their interests. The name of the Department from the beginning has been more or less of a misnomer.

To submit a report that will give the best results, I find it necessary to present each branch or division of the Department separately, treating each subject or division separate and distinct from the other.

In order that the public may be advised of the magnitude and importance of the Department of Agriculture, I give below an outline of the duties of the Commissioner of Agriculture without giving a treatise on each subject.

1. The Division of Agriculture.
2. The Division of Immigration.
3. The Prison Division.
4. The Pure Food and Drugs, Stock Feed, Fertilizer and Citrus Fruits Division.

5. The Land Division.
6. The Field Note Division.
7. The Shell Fish Division.

In addition to the above the Commissioner of Agriculture is a member of the following Boards:

1. The Board of Commissioners of State Institutions.
2. The Board of Pardons.
3. The Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund.
4. The Board of Drainage Commissioners.

WHO HAS SUPERVISION OF THE STATE PRISON?

Prior to June 7, 1913, the Commissioner of Agriculture had supervision of the State Prison. The last Legislature enacted Chapter 6530, which was approved June 7, 1913, and which is known as the State Convict Law. In this Act the Legislature delegated supervision to the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions, a board composed of the Governor, as chairman, and the six members of his cabinet.

SECTIONS SEVENTEEN AND TWENTY-SIX OF ARTICLE FOUR OF THE STATE CONSTITUTION CONFLICTING.

Section 17, Article 4, of the State Constitution, reads as follows:

"The Governor and the administrative officers of the Executive Department shall constitute a Board of Commissioners of State Institutions, which Board shall have supervision of all matters connected with such institutions in such manner as shall be prescribed by law."

Section 26, of Article 4, of the State Constitution, reads as follows:

"The Commissioner of Agriculture shall perform such duties in relation to agriculture as may be prescribed by law; shall have supervision of all matters pertaining to public lands under regulations prescribed by law, and shall keep the bureau of immigration. He shall also have supervision of the State Prison, and shall perform such other duties as may be prescribed by law."

SUPERVISION BY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF STATE INSTITUTIONS.

As Chapter 6530, Acts of 1913, the State Convict Law, has been construed by the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions to be in harmony with Section 17 of Article 4 of the State Constitution, therefore the Board has assumed the duties of prison supervision.

SHORT REPORT.

The management and supervision of the State Prison being assumed by the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions, as above stated, this report is necessarily very short and is confined to the few matters that come directly under this Department, with the few recommendations and suggestions that follow.

SOME INTERESTING STATISTICS.

FROM 1911-12 REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE.

Prior to 1880 the State maintained her convicts at the State Penitentiary, at what is now the Asylum for the Insane, at Chattahoochee.

In 1879 the Legislature passed an Act abolishing the State Penitentiary, and authorized the leasing of the State convicts. This was the beginning of the lease system, which has continued to the present time, and it was also the beginning of one of the most important institutions in this State, known as the Asylum for the Insane. It will be interesting further to know that prior to 1880 the State of Florida kept her insane at Columbia, South Carolina.

Below I give the amount received from the hire of State convicts, by years, for the thirty-two years they have been leased, from 1880 to 1912, inclusive.

*NOTE.—We notice in 1885 the State paid $2,500.00 for the maintenance of the State convicts. For the years 1886, 1887, 1888, 1899 and 1890 the State received nothing for their hire.

Approved June 7, 1913.

SOME RECOMMENDATIONS.

As stated in a preceeding paragraph, the Governor and his Cabinet constitute the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions.

This Board has direct control and supervision of the State Prison and the Hospital for the Insane. This Board also has an indirect control of the Industrial School for Boys, which school is located at Marianna.

On account of the many duties that are to be performed by the Governor and his Cabinet and the need, at all times, of close supervision and careful management for the institutions named, I recommend the following:

That the Legislature at the next session, which convenes on April 6, 1915, provide for a "Board of Control of State Institutions," said Board to have direct supervision and control of the State Prison, the Hospital for the Insane and the Industrial School for Boys.

These institutions now have a combined population of approximately 3,000, and each year finds material increase in population over that of the preceeding year.

This recommendation is based on the following grounds:

1. It would insure better management.
2. It would insure closer co-operation.
3. It would place all work under one management
4. It would mean economy in the end.
5. It would mean ability to place responsibility.
6. Present system antiquated.
7. Governor and Cabinet cannot give time necessary to look after the many important details.

THE CONVICT PROBLEM.

From Report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, 1911-12.

One to reach the proper conclusions in connection with the subject of our State convicts must, first of all, recognize the fact that we are dealing with conditions relating to human beings and that all problems relating to the convicts must be solved by the same principles and the application of the same amount of common sense as is applied to the solution of any other of the great problems that confront us. Mere statements, theory and illogical conclusions should have no place in the discussion of this great subject.

The same thing may be said with reference to the other institutions, i. e.; the Hospital for the Insane and the Industrial School for Boys. Every problem that comes up in these institutions is a problem that relates to unfortunate human beings and it should be dealt with promptly and should be solved by the same amount of common sense as is applied in the solution of any other of the great problems that confront us.

COUNTY CONVICTS ON THE PUBLIC ROADS.

I believe the counties should work their convicts on the public roads, or on county farms.

"On release they will have learned a useful occupation or trade, at which they can immediately get employment on other roads or farms without the ignominy of being asked where last employed. Farm work and road building are two industries that will give employment to many thousands in the Southland and for the balance of time."

The larger counties should not only work the convicts on the roads, but should have the farm also, as many convicts are unable to do heavy manual labor but could do light farm work, and vegetables and many articles of diet used by the road squad could be produced on the county farm.

CLASSIFICATION OF CONVICTS.

As far as practicable convicts, for road work or for work on the farm, should be divided in the following classes:

A—"The Honor Class, composed of trustworthy, good conduct men, whose terms are short and who have much to lose by attempting to escape."

B—"The Trusty Group, composed of good conduct men, whose sentences are some distance from expiration. To these men the temptation to escape may appeal strongly, yet they have demonstrated some capacity to resist."

C—"The remainder who cannot be trusted."

Group "A" can be put at work without guards, sent on errands and perform for the road camp or farm such duties and such work as would be done by free labor.

Group "B" would perform work more nearly under the Superintendent and would not need special guarding.

Group "C" would be worked at all times under guard, and should be worked in rock or clay pits, or at such other work as would keep the men more or less close together, and thus reduce the guard force to the minimum in number and cost.

THE CONVICTS' PITIABLE CONDITION WHEN RELEASED.

It is no wonder that many convicts leave the prison sullen in temper and with a grudge against the world. It is a known fact that many have been broken down in health, caused from unsanitary surroundings or from overwork, and when discharged they have no money in their pockets and poorly clad, "they must either lie and prob- ably be caught in the lie, or face the fact that ninety-nine times out of a hundred the prospective employer, even if he had a job to offer, will not trust it to an EX-CONVICT."

It is pitiable indeed that these unfortunates leave the institutions, in many instances, worse criminals than when they entered, and from causes that should not exist in this day of our boasted civilization.

THE STATE CONVICTS ON THE PUBLIC ROADS.

The same classification for work should be made with the State convicts as with the county convicts, and only Class "A" should be worked on the public roads. Among the State convicts many of the long term convicts can be placed in the "A" class, as a large per cent of the true and tried men now serving in the State Prison are long term men and life men.

In the Florida State Prison a large per cent of the prison population could be placed in Class "A." I do not think it amiss to say that from sixty to seventy-five per cent of our convicts could, under proper regulations, be placed in Class "A."

"In these days of modern improvement, perhaps there is no economic question of greater importance or receiving more earnest consideration than that of more humane, industrial treatment of the unfortunate convicts and of making them more useful members of society."

For this reason I am unalterably opposed to working, in a promiscuous way, our State convicts on the public roads. The usual custom of taking short and long term convicts, and the good and the bad convicts, and putting them in road vans or cages and hauling them up and down our public roads like so many wild animals, is worse than barbarous, and such a practice should have no place in our modern civilization. Some good men have been made criminals by these practices.

THE OREGON SYSTEM.

From the Proceedings of the Academy of Political Science, in the City of New York.

Good Roads and Convict Labor.—Commencing early in 1904, and continuing until 1908, State convicts were used on the roads of Marion County, Oregon, the county in which the State penitentiary is located. On this work, which was provided for by a special act of the Legislature, only as many convicts were employed as one superintendent could conveniently handle. The work of the convicts was supplemented by that of residents of the vicinity. On the whole, the experiment was considered successful.

This work was recommended in Marion County, under the honor system, in January, 1911, the new Governor (Cswald West) overcoming the lack of suitable legislation by taking the prison situation into his own hands. Although a bill for convict labor on roads was defeated in the State Legislature in February, 1911, the agitation continued during the following spring and summer, and in September the Governor offered State convicts for use on the road from Medford, Oregon, to the Crater Lake National Park. This work was the beginning of the construction of State highways by State prisoners. Honor road camp No. 1 was established and work commenced November 1, 1911. Since then, the work has been continued and developed along similar lines in other parts of the State.

The honor system is used in its most extreme form; there are no guards, chains or stripes; one man from the county is given jurisdiction over the camp, similar to that of the warden inside the prison; an engineer directs the work, but often one of the prisoners acts as foreman. The State provides the clothing which the men wear when they begin the work, but the county supplies further articles, such as shoes, from time to time, as they are needed. The county pays the railroad fare from the penitentiary, boards the men, furnishes all material, and in addition pays twenty-five cents a day as wages to each prisoner. During the first six months of honor work, of one hundred and fifty men, only three broke their word and attempted to escape. During a similar period, two years before, ten men, all under heavy guard, escaped from inside the prison walls, while shortly afterwards, in an attempt to work the men outside, eighteen got away; still later, six escaped at one time, of whom two were killed before all were recaptured. Comparison of these facts does much to indicate the efficiency of the honor system.

In 1911 the prisoners were employed almost entirely in quarrying and crushing stone, in preparation for the next year's work. During the past year, one of the principal pieces of work has been the State road from Hood River toward Portland, along the south side of the Columbia River. This road will give an outlet to all other branches from the back country, and will be of inestimable benefit to that part of the State. Such has been the success of the experiment that at the last election an initiative bill was passed providing for road work by State and county prisoners, thus vindicating the whole system, in spite of much previous adverse criticism.

ARIZONA.

The honor system is very similar to that of Oregon. While in prison, the convict stands on his record. Stripes are abolished, and otherwise the authorities treat the convict much like a free man. The convicts wear gray suits, are allowed an unlimited incoming and outgoing daily letter mail, and are given the privilege of the daily newspapers. Many of the foremost papers in the country are subscribed for by the State for the reading-room, and all the popular magazines are taken by the prison authorities for the use of all the prisoners. Musical and literary societies exist, also a mutual improvement league, formed and officered by inmates for the mutual benefit of all the prisoners. As prisoners prove themselves worthy of trust, greater freedom and more responsibilities are accorded them.

Finally, after successful trial, they are made honor men on road work, and are absolutely without guard. No firearms are allowed in the honor camps. One days' work, eight hours, counts for two days off the sentence. After work is done, and on Sundays, a prisoner's time is his own. It has been found advisable to separate Mexican from American prisoners. In one instance, the foremen over both gangs were men serving life and twenty-year sentences. There are now two men acting as watchmen in the temporarily abandoned camp in a very isolated spot in the Pinal Mountains, who are both life-termers. As a rule, the only civilian in camp is the engineer who directs the construction.

While there have been some objections to the system, it now appears to be firmly established.

NEW MEXICO.

New Mexico claims the distinction of being the first State to adopt the honor system, and successfully work prisoners on public highways by this means, the "honor systems" in this instance taking the form of reduction of time for good behavior, in addition to the reduction ordinarily allowed. The working of prisoners on State roads was first authorized by an act of 1903, which provided that they be employed on a road between Santa Fe and Las Vegas. Road construction has been continued ever since that time. For the past three years, four camps of about thirty convicts each, have been employed on roads, some free laborers recruited from the vicinity working with the convicts. In 1912, an average of seventy-four prisoners were employed on the roads, and of them, twenty-three were in Bernalillo County. The expectation is that the convict force can be increased to about one hundred in the near future.

The selection of prisoners for work in road camps is not confined to short-termers alone. The sentences of the prisoners in road camps range from one year to life. The superintendent has a personal talk with each prisoner selected for road work, and the prisoner must promise on his word of honor that he will obey the rules and make no attempt to escape. Only a small percentage prove unfaithful to their promise. In addition to the reduction of time for good conduct, ten days per month may be earned on road work. The division of cost between State and county is as follows: The State furnishes prisoners with clothing and supervision; the county provides equipment and all camp expenses. The convicts receive no wage.

Road work is declared to be very beneficial, as to both health and character. The efficiency of the labor has been greatly increased by the abolition of armed guards, and is now equal to free labor if properly handled. Continuation of the system under present methods is assured.

Since 1909, all prison sentences in New Mexico have been indeterminate. Having served his minimum sentence without infraction of the rules of the penitentiary, the prisoner is paroled, after suitable employment has first been secured for him with some respectable and responsible person. He is required to report monthly, the report setting forth the number of days under pay, number of days idle, and the reason therefor, amount on hand the first of the month, amount earned during the month, and expenditures.

COLORADO.

In extent of development of convict road work, Colorado takes precedence of all other Western States. Although provided for by law as far back as 1905, a start was not made until 1908, and the bulk of the progress has been during the present prison administration, since 1909, under Warden Thomas J. Tynan.

The law provides that upon request of a majority of a county's road commissioners, the warden of the State penitentiary at Canon City may, at his discretion, allow a squad of convicts with competent overseers to do road work in that county. The State furnishes clothing—blue or khaki—while the county provides for all feeding and housing of men and teams, for tools, materials and additional charges of guarding. Construction work is under the supervision of the warden or his proper representative, the State highway department performing the engineering service.

Convict road work started in May, 1908, under armed guards. About April, 1909, the honor system was introduced, and is still in favor. During 1909 and 1910, there were about 100 convicts working on an average. In 1911 this number was increased to about 200, and toward the end of the year to 300. At present, fifty per cent of the penitentiary inmates are at work outside on the roads or on a farm adjoining the prison, and the warden estimates that seventy-five per cent of ordinary prison inmates could be so used.

A real honor system is in vogue; and to this the success of the work is largely credited. Camps of from thirty to fifty men usually, or even as many as one hundred, are under one or two overseers, with subordinates, and such camps have been located even as far as three hundred miles from the penitentiary. All vestiges of physical restraint—guns, stripes and stockades—are absent. The convicts themselves prefer to do this kind of work rather than any other. As an extra inducement, there is given a regular commutation of sentence amounting to as much as ten days per month, and, in addition, a month further reduction for the first year's road work, two months for the second; and so on to a maximum of six months. The penalty for breaking faith is the return of the convict to prison, and loss of all credits.

The health of the men is considered well-nigh perfect. Work is continued the year round, new detachments of convicts being continually sent out to make up for those who are paroled from camps. It is estimated that the men are fully as capable and efficient as free labor. The authorities consider convict road work a success in every way, and anticipate its continuance and enlargement.

STRIPES SHOULD BE ABOLISHED.

Stripes should be abolished on all convicts as they prove themselves worthy. Let the wearing of stripes indicate one of two things, i. e.: First, that the convict has recently entered the prison. Second, that the convict is guilty of breaking some of the prison rules and is put back in stripes as a punishment.

HONOR CONVICTS.

"Bond for Faithful Performance of Trust."

"The Next Step in Prison Reform," gives in detail a most interesting plan adopted in the "Ohio State Reformatory" under which convicts who are believed to be worthy of the trust are given employment on the prison farm, without physical restraint. When thus put on the farm the convict is handed a bond signed by the convict as "Principal" and by the General Superintendent of the Reformatory as "Surety," the "conditions of the obligation" being as follows:

"Now if the said John Doe, Serial Number 5656, shall well and faithfully execute the trust thus reposed in him and shall observe and obey all the rules and regulations governing said trust, then this obligation with all penalties provided for in the rules and regulations shall be void, and on the release of said John Doe on parole from the Ohio State Reformatory, he shall be given this bond to keep and to hold as positive evidence to all concerned, not only of his good record as an inmate of the reformatory, but that he enjoyed the confidence and faith of the management on the grounds that in all things he conducted himself as becomes a man and a good citizen.

Witness our hands this 20th day of November, A. D. 1913.

John Doe, (Principal)

J. H. Leonard, (Surety)

Bonds like these are used when permitting an inmate of the reformatory to join the group of men who are employed without any physical restraint whatever, that is, when a man undertakes to regulate his conduct by inhibitory forces rather than to be subject of prohibitory stress. Since this system was instituted, ten years ago, the superintendent has signed more than 2600 such bonds, and only 18 of this number have been dishonored."

THE PASS.

When the bond is signed the convict is handed a "pass," which reads as follows:

"In giving you this pass I give you my confidence. I am sure you will fully appreciate this opportunity to demonstrate, not only to me, but to the Board of Managers and to your friends who await your restoration to freedom that you have the self control, the respect for law, and the proper regard for your word of honor that justifies us in permitting you such a large measure of freedom. Remember, when tempted, that trustworthiness is the bed-rock of character."

It is reported by Mr. Berry that: "During the ten years that the system has been in operation in the Ohio Reformatory twenty-six hundred prisoners have been allowed to work in the open without guard. Only eighteen have ever attempted to escape. The others preferred their healthy, interesting work in the open, and the bond and the pass."

OPPOSED TO CONTRACT LABOR SYSTEM BY STATE CONVICTS.

"At its Biennial Convention in 1912, the General Federation of Women's Clubs passed a resolution declaring itself 'as opposed to the contract system of prison labor, and to every other system which exploits this labor to the detriment of the prisoner; and that we urge upon the several States the advisability of establishing outdoor work for able-bodied convicts, remedial care for the feeble and degenerate, and industrial education for all who have the potentiality for reform. * * * The product of the convict's labor should be consumed by the State, and the profit therefrom, above the just cost of his keep, should be used to support each dependent family as he may have.'"

THE ATTITUDE OF ORGANIZED LABOR TOWARD ROAD BUILDING BY CONVICTS.

"Prisoners should be employed at useful and practical productive toil. The labor of the State's unfortunates and derelicts should never be exploited for profit, and certainly never for the private profit of contractors. Let our States employ their prisoners in the production of the necessities of life, for the maintenance of themselves and the inmates of the other State eleemosynary institutions, or else road building."—(From an official statement of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor at its convention in St. Louis, 1910.)

John J. Sonstesy, of the United Garment Workers, in the Proceedings of the National Conference of Charities and Correction, 1912, page 222, says, in regard to the question of road building by convicts:

"Many people think that the only alternative to abolishing the contract or lease system is idleness for the convicts. That this is not true has been proved in the place where the contract and lease systems have been abolished.

"Every convict who has no trade and is capable of learning one should be taught one most suitable for him to make him an efficient, intelligent mechanic, and able to follow the trade when he is released. In the arrangement of employment for the prisoners the State should endeavor to supply itself with everything necessary in its various institutions.

"A large farm should be operated, and all other necessary plants for the turning of the different raw products into the finished articles needed in the various State institutions. The making of roads is an ideal occupation for convicts."

Resolution by the New Jersey Federation of Labor at Its Annual Convention, 1913.

"Resolved, That the New Jersey Federation of Labor urges upon Fielder, so far as he is able, to develop the State use and road work system, and so far as possible continue the policy laid down by his predecessor, President Wilson, on this important subject, and they request him to refuse to renew or execute any new contracts for the work of prisoners or permit the present contracts to be extended."

The Trade Union Attitude Toward Prison Labor.

By John P. Frey, of the International Molders' Journal.
(From Proceedings of National Conference of Charities and Correction, 1912, pp. 212-15.)

"The trade-unions have never advocated that convicts should be kept in idleness, instead they have insisted that convicts should be employed and that the convict's reformation would be impossible without useful and healthful labor. * * *

"It is not the work of the convicts as producers which meets with trade-union opposition, or that by working they may keep some free men idle. It is the methods by which prison labor, when performed for the benefit of private contractors, places the convict's labor on the market, and thereby forces reduction in wages upon large numbers of free workmen, and, by so doing, lower their standard of living."

CONCLUSION.

These are the thoughts and suggestions that have come into my mind upon mature consideration of this important subject during the three years that I have been Commissioner of Agriculture, and I herewith tender them to your earnest and thoughtful attention and consideration in the interest of society as well as humanity.

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, STATE OF FLORIDA,
COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE.

Tallahassee, Fla., January 10, 1917.

Hon. Sidney J. Catts,
Governor of the State of Florida.

Sir ::

I have the honor to submit herewith the Biennial Report of the Prison Division of the Department of Agriculture for the years 1915 and 1916.

Respectfully submitted,
W. A. McRAE,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

PREFACE.

Prior to the adoption of the Constitution of 1885, the Department of Agriculture was known as the 'Department of Lands and Immigration.' The Legislature of 1889 established the Department of Agriculture. This is the fourteenth Biennial Report of the Department of Agriculture and the third to be made by the present incumbent.

There are many people in the State yet who do not recognize the importance of this Department in other matters pertaining to their interests.

To submit a report that will give the best results, I find it necessary to present each branch or division of the Department separately, treating each distinct from the other.

That the public may be advised of the magnitude and range of work of the Department of Agriculture, an outline of the duties of the Commissioner is shown by the following divisions:

1. The Division of Agriculture.
2. The Division of Immigration.
3. The Prison Division.
4. The Pure Food and Drugs, Stock Feed, Fertilizer and Citrus Fruits Division.
5. The Land Division.
6. The Field Note Division.
7. The Fish and Shell Fish Division.

In addition to the above the Commissioner of Agriculture is a member of the following Boards:

1. The Board of Commissioners of State Institutions.
2. The Board of Pardons.
3. The Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund.
4. The Board of Drainage Commissioners.

BRADFORD FARMS

The Model Prison of the South.

Our State put on seven league boots and took a mighty forward stride in 1913, when the Legislature passed Chapter 6530 of the Laws of Florida, entitled:

"An Act to Provide for the location and establishment of a State Prison Farm, and the Improvement and Maintenance of Same; to Provide for the Custody, Care and Maintenance of the State Convicts; to Authorize and Empower the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions to Work and Employ Certain of Said Convicts in Improving and Maintaining Said State Prison Farm; to Lease Certain of Said Convicts and to Work and Employ Certain of Said Convicts Upon the Public Roads of the State, and for Other Purposes, and to Provide Penalties for the Violations Thereof."

This comprehensive law is divided into twenty-three sections and too long to reprint in this connection.

The State at one time had a prison at Chattahoochee, but it was abolished in 1880 and the prison turned into a Hospital for the Insane, an institution quite as needful as the Prison. The State up to 1880 sent its insane to institutions outside the State. The Act of 1879 abolishing the prison authorized the leasing of prisoners, and up to the present time the revenue derived from this source reaches in round figures the large sum of $3,500,000 of which amount $200,000 is invested at the present farm, about $90,000 of it in land. During five years of the period from 1880 to 1913, the State received no income from leased prisoners, and in one year, 1885, it had to pay out about $2,500 for their maintenance.

During recent years the leasing of the prisoners has brought in a good deal of money to the State owing to the demand for prison labor in turpentine operations. On final settlement in 1913, with the Florida Pine Company, the last corporation to which the State leased its prisoners,—one having headquarters at Terrell, in Hernando County, where the able bodied prisoners were congregated for distribution to smaller lessees with hospital for sick and infirm men and women, near Ocala, known as "Marion Farms"—there was collected the sum of $343,781.47. The Marion Farms closed December 31, 1915, the live stock from which was driven from time to time to Raiford by "trusty" prisoners, without the loss of a single head. The actual work at Bradford Farms began in November, 1913, by the building of a temporary stockade by "trusty" prisoners.

Against Leasing Prisoners. .

Sentiment against the leasing system has been growing ever since it has been in vogue. The question of abolishing it has been before various legislatures, and the effort culminated in 1913 in the Act above mentioned. Its wisdom cannot be reasonably questioned. There is no doubt that prisoners can be taken better care of in a central institution where under one management, subject to more direct supervision, there is a chance for classification, reformation, co-operation, economy and the placing of responsibility, than by distributing them about in temporary quarters where morality, sobriety, medical attention and sanitary advantages cannot be so good. Stories of the mistreatment of prisoners in turpentine and lumber camps are now historical incidents, and the wish is expressed that it may not be long before the leasing system in any form may be a thing of the past.

"New times demand new measures and new men;
 The world advances and in time outgrows
 The laws that in our father's days were best,
 And doubtless after us, some purer scheme
 Will be worked out by wiser men than we;
 Made wiser by the steady growth of truth."

Types of Criminals.

From the time of Aristotle, the world's most famous ancient philosopher, to Lombroso of today, who believes the criminal is a special type of man,—possessing traits of savagery, morbidity and insanity,—the wrong doing of mankind has been studied from many angles and the literature devoted to the subject is voluminous. Merro and Ferri, the modern Italian contemporaries of Lombroso, have divided law breakers into the following five classes:

1. Criminals by passion or impulse. To this class most murderers and personal assailants belong.

2. The insane criminal, whose wrong doing is the result of disease, for which there appears to be no remedy except restraint.

3. The instinctive—congenital or born criminal—a trait merged into the insane class. One usually weak or feeble minded and therefore lacking in moral stability.

4. The occasional criminal, generally normal, but weak in character; often the victim of greed, circumstances, temptation and poverty. This perhaps constitutes the largest class of criminals.

5. The professional criminal, usually well developed, one who gets a wrong start in life; gifted with ingenuity and skill, he spends more time in evading the law in his crookedness than would provide a good living in right doing. He belongs to a dangerous class, the members of which take delight in their anti-social perversions.

In all and by large the criminal may be looked upon as a defective, ranging from the idiot, at the bottom round of the social order, up through the insane to the skilled confidence man who plies a vocation in which he takes pride not unlike the normal or right acting man does in his achievements.

Bad environment no doubt plays its share in the mak ing of criminals, but congenital weakness—lack of moral sense or stamina—more perhaps than anything else puts men behind the bars or under the ban of society.

Mankind has inherited physical and mental traits and tendencies, and likewise legislative bodies have followed precedents in law enactments, customs and enforcements, with too much of the spirit of retribution or revenge, "an eye for an eye," in dealing even with first offenders. LAW IN THE OLDEN TIME WAS THE SCIENCE OF TORTURE. The bed of justice was a rack, and thumb screws tore the truth and falsehood—more generally the latter, out by the roots of the nails. In proportion as education advanced the condition of the world became better.

Bradford Farms has representatives of all classes of criminals, more of the occasional criminal than any other, and the question there, as everywhere, is how to handle the exiles for the best interest of themselves and society. The negro constitutes a very large percentage of Florida criminals and the same is true of other Southern States. The negro as a class has a dull or poorly developed moral sense, and lacks mental activity, but as a rule he is a more docile prisoner than the white man.

At the beginning of the 19th century, the statute books of Great Britain contained death penalties for over two hundred crimes, mostly minor ones against property. If death was not inflicted prisoners were either tortured or mutilated by having hand, nose or ears cut off, or else branded on cheek or forehead. Frightful as was English law a century or more ago it was mild compared to more horrible penalties provided in the countries of Europe. Dueling everywhere was gentlemanly and went unpunished. Violent personal assaults resulting in death were punished with fine or imprisonment, while ordinary assaults were considered personal prerogatives. Let the reader calmly run over in his mind a list of one hundred offenses serious enough in his judgment to call for the scaffold as punishment. One hundred years ago some of the American states had the death penalty for no less than a dozen crimes. Ten of our States have now abolished the death penalty. Florida punishes two crimes with death.

Multiplicity of Laws.

The law has made many advances in these later years, but it still abounds in useless verbiage, irritating delays, antiquated opinions and precedents of one sort or another, very much out of line with modern life, modern science, modern discoveries and modern ideas of justice. The tendency, however, in recent years is the attempt to regulate everything by statute. The Legislatures of the various States last year passed over 16,000 new laws, and Florida had a share in this number. This growing superfluity of laws, so voluminous that no one man can know them, regularly adds to the legal criminal list a large number of persons who would not knowingly violate any law. In the old days the elector went to the polls and voted without being subjected to arrest, fine and imprisonment in a score of ways as is the case today. Few men in these days are exempt under the multitudinous restrictions being constantly imposed, from being guilty of some offense and liable to criminal prosecution. It was ex-Governor, J. W. Folk, of Missouri, who once said: "When in doubt, pass a law." Sixty thousand laws have been enacted in the United States in the last five years. Only the lawyer—if this keeps up—who makes a business of studying the statutes, will be able to familiarize himself with them and keep out of jail.

Punishment does not always fit the crime. When one becomes familiar with the inequality of penalties he is forced to the conclusion that the passing of sentences for crime is a good deal of a lottery. Penalties for the same crime vary greatly in the different States. For example in Florida the bigamist is given a limit of five years, while in Georgia he gets ten. For assault with intent to kill the Florida law provides an extreme penalty of 20 years, while Georgia decrees ten years as the limit. Four States provide the limit of death for first degree burglary, while one State puts seven years as the limit. Eight States provide death penalties for first degree arson, while two States give a range of from one to ten years in prison. Strikingly arbitrary differences will be found in the various States for all kinds of crime. Altogether the degrees of crime and the penalties provided seem like guess work, when comparisons are made, and when the range of a sentence is from one to twenty years it gives a court a good deal of latitude.

Up to recent years the sole object of the prison seemed to have been revenge and it took many cruel shapes. Today, in enlightened states, it takes the form of restraint and reformation. The combination method is practiced at Bradford Farms. It is hoped that in time by the enlargement of the farm that all of the State's offenders may be collected there, where the various classes may be classified and proper methods applied. The importance of this cannot be calculated in dollars and cents, weighed in pounds and ounces, nor measured in feet and inches. It would mean systematic supervision and betterment for all.

Humane Treatment.

It is not out of place in this connection to quote a few paragraphs from recent reports of this Department:

"One to reach the proper conclusions in connection with the subject of our State convicts must, first of all, recognize the fact that we are dealing with conditions relating to human beings and that all problems relating to the convicts must be solved by the same principles and the application of the same amount of common sense as is applied to the solution of any other of the great problems that confront us. Mere statements, theory and illogical conclusions should have no place in the discussion of this great subject."

"In these days of modern improvement, perhaps there is no economic question of greater importance or receiving more earnest consideration than that of humane, industrial treatment of the unfortunate convicts and of making them more useful members of society."

"For this reason I am unalterably opposed to working, in a promiscuous way, our State Convicts on the public roads. The usual custom of taking short and long term convicts, and the good and the bad convicts, and putting them in road vans or cages and hauling them up and down our public roads like so many wild animals, is worse than barbarous, and such a practice should have no place in our modern civilization. Some good men have been made criminals by these practices."

"I believe the counties should work their convicts on the public roads, or on county farms."

"On release they will have learned a useful occupation or trade, at which they can immediately get employment on other roads or farms without the ignominy of being asked where last employed. Farm work and road building are two industries that will give employment to many thousands in the Southland and for the balance of time."

"The larger counties should not only work the convicts on the roads, but should have the farm also, as many convicts are unable to do heavy manual labor but could do light farm work, and vegetables and many articles of diet used by the road squad could be produced on the county farm."

Supervision of State Prisoners.

Until June 7, 1913, the matter of supervision of State convicts was largely under the direction of the Commissioner of Agriculture. Chapter 6530, of the Acts of that year, included the Prison with other State Institutions, to provide uniformity, and delegated the supervision to the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions, of which the Commissioner of Agriculture is a member. This Board is composed of the Governor, as Chairman, and the six members of his cabinet. By this change the Commissioner of Agriculture has been able to devote more time to other important duties.

The Prison Bureau of the Department of Agriculture superintends the movement of Physicians and Inspectors who regularly visits State and County camps and furnish the bureau with reports concerning the condition of these prisoners, detailing the character, quantity and quality of food and clothing supplied, of sleeping quarters and general treatment of prisoners by contractors and guards.

Guards, who are employed only upon the recommendation of responsible parties, subscribe under oath to observe certain requirements and are promptly dismissed for infractions of rules—profanity and abusive language being among the prohibitive offenses.

This Bureau also keeps the records of admission of prisoners, issues discharges, in short, has a detailed history of each person unfortunate enough to lose his liberty through violations of the law. This Bureau, of which Judge T. E. Andrews, is Chief Clerk, co-operates in every detail with the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions, which Board directs the purchase, under bids, of supplies for all State Institutions, keeps the accounts between the State and lessees of prisoners, and also keeps the accounts of Bradford Farms and makes all collections. It is the financial office while the Bureau in the Department of Agriculture may be considered as the record office, but which enjoys a certain independent supervision, and one serves as a check on the other. The secretary of the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions is Mr. A. H. Roberts, in whose office will be found negatives and photographs of all State prisoners.

All leases are made by competitive bids and run for two years, the prices fluctuating not unlike the market for naval stores. State prisoners under the law of 1915 are divided into the following grades:

First: All able bodied colored males. These only are subject to lease. No whites of either sex or colored females are leased.

Second: White and colored females and hospital and infirm colored.

Third: White males of all ages and colored males who have served ten or more years, and colored males not belonging to first or second. Prisoners by good conduct are given time, as will be seen by the following table, as authorized by the legislature of 1915:

term prisoners than to the long term ones. For example the one year man gained one month and 21 days, while the twenty year man only gained two years, 10 months and 8 days. Under the present system the one year man gains 24 days, while the 20 year one gains 7 years and 73 days. Under the old law leases were made for four years and included all classes of prisoners.

Beginning of Bradford Farms.

Chapter 6530 of the Laws of Florida provided for what is officially known as Bradford Farms, but more commonly called the State Prison Farm. As will be noted by the illustration of the entrance, the archway announces "Bradford Farms," and no reference will be found anywhere at the farm of "Prison" or "Penitentiary." The words "Bradford Farms" appear on the locomotive and cars used on the State owned railroad running on the property, of which more details will be found further on in this report.

In the month of July following the enactment of the law, State Treasurer J. C. Luning, the Commissioner of Agriculture, and Captain D. W. Purvis, Superintendent of "Marion Farms," visited the Prisons and Reformatory Institutions of North Carolina, South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, and made thorough investigations of various systems in use for the care, correction and reformation of men and women who had been separated from freedom for offences of one kind or other. North Carolina has two farms; South Carolina one; Mississippi three,—one with 11,000 acres in cultivation, devoted to cotton,—Louisiana two; and Texas five. Alabama and Georgia farms were not visited, but neither has large farms, the prisoners in the former State being leased mostly to mine operators, and in the latter given over to road building.

Bird's Eye View, Stables, Bradford Farms.

The committee returned convinced of the importance of having plenty of land, with ample supply of wholesome water, available transportation facilities, and desirable climatic conditions. These requirements had all been met in the purchase, during the administration of Governor Gilchrist, of a tract of land comprising about seventeen thousand acres, and now known as Bradford Farms. The cost of everything in connection with the farm has been paid for from money acquired by the leasing of prisoners.

The property is about twelve miles northwest of Starke, and located between the Atlantic Coast Line on the west, the Seaboard Air Line on the east and the Georgia Southern & Florida on the south. The land reaches the A. C. L. close to the enterprising town of Raiford, two and a quarter miles southwest from the central prison buildings and connection between town and farm is had by two good wagon roads.

A State-Owned Railroad.

Rail connection for hauling supplies is had with the A. C. L. and S. A. L. by a State owned line known as the Bradford Farms Railroad, completed for a distance of eleven miles, from Raiford on the Atlantic Coast Line to the Seaboard Air Line north of Lawtey. The road bed was built by prisoners and is of the most substantial character, first class cypress and pine ties cut by the prisoners, being used; the track being laid with 56-pound rail—second hand, but practically new and bought at a bargain. The survey was made by a most competent and experienced engineer, and it is needless to say more than that he selected a route possible of being economically constructed, with durability and safety always in view. There is only one bridge of any cost on the whole line, that across New river.

The equipment at present consists of a locomotive, six flats and two box cars. These will be ample for the time to handle business on the farm. Connection with two trunk lines will supply all that may ever be needed in the form of cars to bring goods in or ship products out. A depot is being erected on a site where an ice factory, saw mill and storage warehouse are being constructed.

The practical beginning of work in connection with clearing the land and putting up the prison buildings began in the winter of 1913-14, and a huge task confronted Superintendent D. W. Purvis, who was selected for the duty, but he was equal to every emergency. He found a wild tract of flat woods and pine land, with a succession of jungles and heavy stumped cypress swamps, ponds and creeks,—and masses of brim and other fish, large enough to be fried, were caught in ponds where the shops stand.

To carve a farm out of the wilderness and jungle and build a city, is no ordinary undertaking, even when the workers are free men, all animated in a common purpose, but to gather hundreds of men together—misfits, derelicts, incompetents, and competents, all under guard—and direct their movements, a badly mixed collection of out of joint humanity and mold it into a harmoniously working force, is a record worthy of more than ordinary commendation.

The Home Plant.

The central plant now consists of some thirty-five buildings and these include six prison structures for living purposes,—four of these inclosed in a stockade,—the largest 100 by 120 feet, ample to accommodate about 250 prisoners. Races and sexes are kept separated. The main buildings contain commodious and airy rooms with barred windows, each room 42 feet high from floor to comb of the roof. The sleeping quarters are large dormitories, not unlike military barracks, and supplied with iron beds. In most northern prisons men are kept in separate cells. Each building has its own dining room. The work of cooking and bread making is done by prisoners, as well as the laundry work and the making and repairing of clothes. One of the enclosed buildings is the hospital.

The outside buildings include six residences for officers, one for guards, one commissary, one carpenter shop, one blacksmith shop, one shop for plumbing and other supplies, six barns, one syrup factory—the daily consumption being in excess of a barrel; one smoke house, now filled with hams, shoulders and bacon; two silos, one barrel factory, and about a dozen buildings of various sizes for storing tools, machinery, etc.,—no implement ever being left exposed. Much of the work of constructing the buildings was done by the prisoners. On the west or river farm there is a large rest and dining hall, where the work squads eat and pass the noon time, to avoid the long walk to the main plant. Scattered about over the property are various small buildings formerly occupied by owners of the little farms bought up to solidify the prison estate. The red roofs covering wells—from which the water carriers for the working squads get their supplies—are to be seen in every direction. The best of the purchased farm buildings are occupied by old "trusties," who take care of chickens and live stock. It is no small task to keep up repairs—all by prisoners.

The Superintendent is provided with a good home, and it is with him that the visiting officials stop during their frequent trips of inspection, the second story being reserved for that purpose. The labor in building this residence was by prisoners.

The main buildings are kept painted. White-wash is used on the small structures and board fences at the home plant. A wire fence encloses 5,000 acres of the 17,000 acres owned, with some 3,000 under plow and cultivated to cotton, corn, cane, potatoes, peas, etc. In the garden plots will be found everything from beans to watermelons, and it is a sight worth photographing when a wagon load is turned loose among the prisoners at the noon rest and dinner hour. The Irish potato patch of 550 acres last year was the one feature that has been given wide attention. A much larger acreage is given to sweet potatoes, a most profitable crop.

Opposition to Prison Labor.

Opposition has been made to the Bradford Farms engaging in the production of crops for sale. Plea has also been advanced against employing prisoners even producing their own food. The prison must be supported and if the prisoners are not employed in doing it the burden falls upon the public in the form of taxes.

No forward step has ever been taken in the past without opposition. A century ago the farmers of America gained a scanty living from the soil; they lived poorly; were clothed in garments of coarse material and were content with fare meager in quality and limited in quantity. Man has struggled upward slowly and was convinced only when he was defeated. Argument did not make him give up his prejudices but facts did. When it was shown that a cotton gin would clean more cotton and do it better than his own hands, he reluctantly admitted the fact, but sturdily opposed the next application of a like principle. The railroad was opposed for many unreasonable reasons. It was declared that the iron mold board plow would poison the soil and the first American factory a century ago failed because the manufacturer could not sell his output. Over-production has ever been the cry. It was predicted that the automobile would put the horse out of use, and yet horses are worth more now than they ever were. It is probable that opposition will be advanced to each innovation entered into at Bradford Farms.

There is no desire on the part of the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions to do a single thing detrimental to the interest of any free man in Florida. They have studied the work they have in hand from every angle and every step they take is intended to redound to the public welfare. Bradford Farms will be made—is now—an institution of which every Floridan can well be proud. It is to be a model, worthy of study, and it can never in these days of rapidly increasing population, and multiplying demands, overstock any market with what it may produce with any surplus left after supplying that institution, and other State institutions.

There must be employment for prisoners. It is unthinkable, impossible, cruel, that they should be kept in idleness. There is widespread opposition to prison labor coming in competition with free labor. Every man who produces anything necessary comes in competition with others engaged in a like pursuit. But the problem is to eliminate competition as far as possible between the two. Working prisoners on the roads is offered as a solution, yet free men can work on the roads, and also engage in the preparation of road material. Florida will probably never become a leading manufacturing State, but will become important in agriculture. Its possibilities in this respect are very great. It will be many years before the United States as a whole will be able to supply its constantly increasing city population with ample food supplies. The farmers themselves are not feeding themselves with the abundance and variety they could and should.

The effort everywhere now in prison management is to provide employment for inmates that shall be good for all concerned, with all fairness to the State, the prisoner and the free laborer. There is too often, however, a straining for economy wherein the object of the prison is overlooked, and that is discipline and work for the prisoner that may lift him out of the rut and enable him to make his own way when back again in the world.

Several of the States have abolished contract labor in prisons, and Congress has decreed against it in Federal prisons. Bills have been before Congress to restrict interstate shipments of prison made goods. It is not contemplated to establish factories at Bradford Farms and sell the services of prisoners to contractors for the making of goods for the general market in competition with free labor. There is no good reason, however, why the prisoners should not be used to support themselves by raising food crops, and even to the making of their own clothing.

We are not arguing for or defending any particular system of prison labor. The prisoners must be supported, if not by their own labor, by taxes imposed on free labor. The era of cruelty in mere punishment has passed away in enlightened lands. The purpose and intent today is reformation. Nothing is more serious than to keep men in idleness. Next in harmfulness is to require them to do something without results.

Not only should prisoners labor under some system to maintain themselves, but produce something for other State Institutions occupied by the helpless, and then share the surplus with families, the members of which often become dependants or worse. When the family is saved from poverty and possible prostitution additional crime is prevented. Prisoners in this way are made to feel that the State is a friend and not an enemy.

If imprisonment is to be used as a means of good, prisoners must be made fit to live properly, equipped with industrial and useful habits by which they may be able to support themselves when they return to society. Men will always be needed on the farm and when thus employed while under sentence they are given knowledge of a useful calling and their minds are occupied and stimulated. It would therefore seem a duty to employ men in work in which they may find employment without unnecessary questioning about their last place of work after they are restored to freedom.

Introduction of Prisoners.

When prisoners arrive at Bradford Farms they are enrolled and given a serial number—the number January 1, 1917, being 12,575, the system dating back to 1877, —forty years—prior to which the subject is one for the historian. He is then given a bath, a hair cut, a shave, a suit of clothes (stripped), and a pair of easy fitting shoes. Then he is photographed with the serial number in large figures across his breast. A profile view is then taken on the same film with the serial number and the film sent to the office of the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions at Tallahassee, to be used for advertising purposes in the event of an escape, or for possible identification of men guilty of crime in other States.

In addition the prisoners are stripped and examined for scars or other marks of possible use in identification.

These are printed on a sheet containing a personal description, including various measurements, with color of hair, eyes, etc. This sheet is sent with the photographs.

Improved Methods of Identification.

At a meeting of the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions held in December, 1916, the Finger Print System of Identification was adopted for the State Prison. The finger prints will be filed with the Jacksonville Police Department, which has an officer skilled in the classification and indexing of such prints, and with the National Bureau of Identification operated in connection with the United States Prison at Leavenworth, Kansas.

Improved methods are also under consideration for the issuance of escape notices. The adoption of the Finger Print System and of the other improved methods under consideration at the close of the year will reduce to a minimum the number of successful escapes from the Florida State Prison.

The finger print system is now considered the most accurate and conclusive method known for purpose of identification. Millions of impressions have been taken and no two are alike. They are used by the United States and foreign army and navy authorities, to identify deserters and for the recognition of unidentified dead on the battlefield. Large city saving banks use finger prints for protection of persons unable to read or write, thereby preventing the withdrawal of funds by those unauthorized. It is proposed to introduced in Congress a bill to establish a National Bureau of Identification, and require all residents after a certain age to be finger printed, to be used in cases of the unknown dead and to identify criminals. The police department of Jacksonville having installed the finger print system it is expected the other cities of the State will adopt it.

Hours of Labor.

The hours at Bradford Farms are not banking ones. It is a case of "early to bed and early to rise." The rising bell rings at 4:30 A. M. every day in the year. Breakfast is ready at 5 and the various squads have eaten and are ready for work at 6 o'clock. In summer the bell at eleven o'clock calls them to rest and dinner. Out again at 2 P. M., they are recalled at six to washup and get ready for supper at 6:30. The actual working hours number nine. From 6:30 to 7:30 P. M., they are allowed to read or talk, and then they must go to bed. On Saturday they discontinue work at 3 P. M., and every man is required to take a bath and change his clothes. Careful attention is given to the personal cleanliness of the prisoners and bathing is required for that reason as well as for sanitary purposes.

There is a plentiful supply of water with shower and bath tubs in ample numbers for all inmates. The water comes from an artesian well and is pumped to a 50,000 gallon tank a hundred feet high, central in the stockade. It is planned to increase the water supply by adding a 100,000 gallon tank. Water is piped throughout all the buildings, and as all are of wood every precaution is taken to prevent the possibility of fire, and to this time there has been no loss on that account. As all prisoners are lodged and employed on ground floors there is little probability of any loss of life in the event of fire.

Sunday at Bradford Farms.

Sunday at Bradford Farms is a day of rest, reading and recreation. Inmates are up at the usual hour and the time is spent as they are disposed—within the rules. They have access to the prison yards, and can indulge in baseball, football, running and wrestling matches and other harmless sports. No cards are allowed and profane and vulgar language is strictly forbidden among inmates as well as among the guards. The first offense among guards meets with a reprimand, and a repetition means dismissal. Among prisoners the punishment depends upon the nature of the offense, usually the loss for a time of some privilege or else a change to harder work.

Sunday schools are held in the various dormitories at 9 A. M. with officers as superintendents and prisoners as teachers. There is preaching at 3 P. M. usually by ministers—to the white prisoners—from neighboring towns, or the occasional visitor from a distance. There are several white and many colored prisoners who essay to preach, and the latter are not abridged in time and accordingly they indulge in long drawn out addresses, punctuated with gestures common to the race. The singing is congregational at all services, from Gospel Hymns, and a mighty volume of song bursts forth when a familiar tune is sung.

Letters are written on Sundays to friends. All mail comes either to Bradford Farms, Raiford, Fla., or else is addressed to Box 221, Raiford, Fla., and the words "prison" or "penitentiary" are never seen on envelopes sent to prisoners. The incoming and outgoing mail runs from 2,000 to 2,500 letters a week. This is all examined at the prison office for obvious reasons.

It is hoped later to establish a school for those who need instruction, to be held at convenient hours. A library is also planned, and persons so disposed are invited to send books and magazines to help swell the small nucleus there at this time.

Prisoners Are Well Fed.

Superintendent Purvis believes in the adage that "an army marches on its stomach," in other words men to work well must have plenty to eat. A man with a poorly fed stomach can rarely be found to have a disposition inclined to work, or to indulge in kindly thoughts and much less to love. And this brings to mind the old time phrase: "The shortest way to a man's heart is through his stomach." Accordingly the prisoners at Bradford Farms have enough to eat. In the morning they have meat, grits or rice, gravy, syrup, white bread and coffee. The latter once a day. At noon, meat, gravy, sweet potatoes, rice or some other vegetable, corn-bread and water. At night, meat, gravy, syrup, vegetables, corn-bread and water. And no one is stinted in quantity.

On Sundays the meat diet may be varied with fish and fresh meats, and prisoners are allowed to buy extras or use what may be sent by friends. Prisoners are permitted to spend fifty cents a week. Chewing tobacco is furnished, but no smoking is allowed, and the carrying of matches is strictly forbidden under penalty.

The regime of the prison in regular hours, nourishing food, exercise in useful employment, and freedom from debasing habits usually puts the short term prisoners in good physical trim for a return to the honest walks of life. The long term men all hope, by good conduct, to secure reductions in time and if they conform to rules they are favored. Superintendent Purvis early recognizes the worth and candor in the men under him and never denies a request to recommend clemency to those who earn and deserve it.

Safeguarding Escapes.

Men occasionally escape from Bradford Farms regardless of the careful supervision. Since January 1, 1916, six men have attempted it—and only one succeeded. The list of escapes shown in the report is mainly from camps of lessees. A photograph and description of an escape are in the hands of every sheriff and large city police chiefs in the State, and among many outside agencies, particularly at points in other States where he may have lived.

Most of the prisoners work in the fields, or in the woods cutting timber or pulling stumps. Each squad is under guard, but the opportunity and the man connect now and then and a dash is made for liberty. The alarm is sounded at once, and guards and often "trusties", with dogs in advance, are on the trail and they seldom miss their quarry. The common impression is that the so-called blood-hounds are particularly vicious beasts—the "eat 'em up" type of dog is of the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" style of creation. A trained dog has some strange gift of smell unknown to man. Incessantly surrounded by different scents and smells to which he appears indifferent until his attention is aroused by one or another of these vagrant effuvia, which he extricates from the mingled tangle floating in the air. His nose is placed on the foot print of a runaway and off he goes and with surprising certainty, manifesting his joy by loud baying, in which he is joined by his fellow dogs. The world is a reservoir of mystery, and this distinguishing power of scent in the dog is one of them.

The chance of escape is so much against a man that none but the foolhardy or stupidly ignorant try it. An attempt to escape results in a loss of time gained by any previous good conduct, and so the sensible inmates accept conditions and by meritorious conduct they get out, if not pardoned, in accordance with the reductions as shown by the table given elsewhere in this report.

It may seem a little singular that there is a large proportion of "trusties" among life prisoners than otherwise. This may be accounted for from the fact that many murders are perpetrated in the heat of passion, by men who in the main are not naturally bad, as is the case of professional law breakers. There are men at the Bradford Farms who ought not to be there, but circumstances are against them. By good conduct, however, they earn pardons. The Pardon Board in Florida is composed of the Governor, as Chairman, the Secretary of State, the Comptroller, the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Agriculture. One only needs to spend a few days at Bradford Farms, study affairs, talk with prisoners and some visitors at least would follow the example set by Ex-Governor Cole Blease, of South Carolina, who has been severely condemned for doing what others might do if given the authority. It is hoped that the reader of this will be lenient with the members of our Pardon Board when they give a man another chance to square himself with the world. They study carefully each case and are seldom wrong when a pardon is granted, and may be wrong now and then in not giving applicants their freedom.

There are bad men at Bradford Farms, and they are known, and while their retention is not vindictive or cruel, yet the welfare of others must be considered.

Superintendent Purvis and his associates, and the Pardon Board, know conditions better than the public does, and all they seek is industrial and general welfare. The period of severe retaliation has passed away, and the object now is reformation and its up to prisoners by good behavior and repentance to clear the way again to the world. It must be understood that Superintendent Purvis is no molly-coddle with his kindness. He is firm and severe when it is required. Men occasionally get corporeal punishment, administered with a strap, right where they used to get it when boys. And usually a second dose is not common. If there was more physical punishment at the beginning with boys and young men, there would be fewer of them in prison. A scolding or lecture don't hurt—the memory of a tongue lashing is not as enduring as one administered with a strap. Whether Solomon or not said “spare the rod and spoil the child,” there is truth in the adage.

The mayor of a Florida city had a colored boy brought before him for stealing a bicycle. The boy said he found the bicycle standing in the street. The owner testified that it had been there most of the day, and the boy passed it several times. He finally concluded the owner had forgotten it, and the temptation to ride it away became stronger each time. The mayor knowing the boy was not naturally bad told the father if he would take him home and give him a good switching, in the presence of the marshal, he would dismiss the case. Had he followed the usual habit the boy would have gone to the jail, the county would have been put to expense in the way of fees and other costs, the grand jury would have convicted him, he would have landed at Bradford Farms for a term of years, to be returned to the world at last, whether better or worse, is a debatable question. With more of these Solomon-like decisions many a boy could be saved from a life of shame and our court expenses would be much lighter. While it is a solemn duty to seek the reformation of the man who has gone wrong—a downfall often due to liquor, dope and gambling habits— it is no less a duty to save the young man from the stigma of a criminal life and record by hasty condemnation for a thoughtless caprice or act.

Reformation the Object of Bradford Farms.

The object of a prison is two-fold. First, that of supplying a place where the criminal is for a time detained where he can do no harm. Second, with the prospect and intent as a deterrent to him and others of his type. Penologists differ in their opinion of crime. Some insist that the habitual criminal is mentally unsound and should be a hospital patient. Others urge the use of more severity against those who commit crimes of violence against persons than in cases where the wrong doing involves property only. The garroters of London and Paris were only suppressed by giving severity for severity. The whip alone stopped their assaults. In low orders of intelligence the surest appeal is to the physical feelings.

In Delaware the whipping post deals out punishment in kind, the wife beater and brutal man gets what he inflicts upon others, and in most cases the punishment proves a deterrent against repetition. Among primitive men to argue or reason instead of striking may be interpreted not as mercy, but as weakness or cowardice, to be treated with contempt.

Many nationalities are represented at Bradford Farms and nearly all trades and professions. A colored man who takes care of the incubator chicks, of which he has raised several hundred during the past year, besides doing some other work,—is a native of Bombay, India, where he lived until of age. Then, as a sailor, he visited many lands and finally reached Florida. He is serving twelve years for a murderous assault. He is a preacher and a man of more than average intelligence of his race. The oldest man in point of service has been in confinement for 23 years. He has a good record and would be given a pardon but for the fact that he has no home to go to, and the Pardon Board never pardons any one not capable of taking care of himself or who has no friends who desire his return and would care for him. One prisoner, who visited the farm two years ago, and came in an automobile with some lady friends, remarked in a jocular way that he was there to pick out his room. His return proved to be a case of the unexpected coming true, except that he did not choose his room.

Superintendent Purvis is a busy man. He is up at 4 o'clock A. M. every day, and after an hour or more of inspection, has breakfast, then he is on the go until 8 P. M., and often later. Nothing escapes his observation. With wonderful self control he is a master of himself and of others. He realizes the fact that most men who get into prison do so for want of self-control. Strong will-power with ideals, but without self-control, not infrequently get men into difficulty. Lack of ideals and want of will power is the lamentable condition of a great many prisoners.

The average prisoner at Bradford Farms, however, is amenable to fair treatment, and men disposed to submit to discipline are quickly recognized by Superintendent Purvis, and he knows his guards as well as the inmates. The pay provided for guards does not secure the class of men he would like to have, but those he has well know that he is not a man to be trifled with, and the prisoners soon find out the same fact.

A prisoner who acted as table waiter had been delegated to ring the bell. As an incentive to be prompt he was given $5.00 a month for this additional duty. One morning he rang the bell violently, much to the alarm of Superintendent Purvis, who is ever on the alert for fear of fire. The bell ringer was interrogated as to why he rang the bell unnecessarily long. He gave no satisfactory reason and sullenly said: "If I don't ring it right get somebody else." To this insolent reply the Superintendent quietly remarked; "Well, I think I can find a man." The punishment came next morning when the offender joined the stump pulling gang.

Uniformity and System.

Every thing is being worked out systematically at Bradford Farms. As the cleared area is extended roads and drainage ditches are built, the ditches on each side of the road, a double system of ample capacity, the earth being used to build up the road—instead of single ditches with earth heaped up in unsightly stretches to be washed back into the ditch.

Along the main roads oak, magnolia, palm, pecan, fruit and ornamental trees are being planted. Along these too will run telephone lines to connect up the various buildings, so that all parts of the wide spreading estate can be brought into prompt communication with headquarters. Several small parks are planned, and work on one is well under way. Stretches of woodland will be maintained for wind breaks, for pasture and shelter for stock, and to invite singing birds. About the prison buildings small bird houses are to be seen. The presence of many kinds of native birds, busy in the destruction of bugs and worms injurious to vegetation, is a pleasing feature of Bradford Farms.

Good stock will be found at Bradford Farms. The horses, mules, cattle, hogs and chickens are of the best. No better horses are found in Kentucky, no better mules in Missouri, no better hogs in Iowa, no better chickens in New England, and all are natives of Florida. The cows give as much and as good milk as the dairy herds of Wisconsin or Minnesota. The meat in the smoke house is as good as any from the packing houses of the North. And thousands of pounds of bacon and hams are always on hand.

There are no boarders among the animals. They must reproduce in kind and to the limit or else go out of business. Stock raising is a business proposition at Bradford Farms, and the example set is worthy of examination by stock raisers and of duplication on every farm in Florida.

Superintendent Purvis never goes out on his regular daily drive over the farm without carrying with him a few ears of corn, and this he shells off, in driving through the pastures where the hogs, separated in size and age are kept, and throwing out some to the animals that come running at his call. It is a pleasing sight to the visitor to see animals coming in all directions, and none to be seen until he calls, and then they gather in a group about his buggy, and gruntingly await his attention. A picture is shown of a dipping vat, of capacity ample to take care of the hundreds of head of cattle to be seen on the forested pasture lands of the farm.

Baseball Club, Bradford Farms.

The official roll of the prison consists of Superintendent, Physician, Bookkeeper and Cashier, Captain of the guards, Yard-master, with eleven foremen, eight night guards, three women guards, thirty-two squad guards, and one railroad engineer.

The Prison Population.

The prison population of the State on January 1, 1917, was 1,620, about 82 per cent being colored. The population at Bradford Farms is divided as follows: White males, 294; white females, 6; colored males—men in for ten years or more and hospital patients, 282—and 59 colored females. There are twenty turpentine camps employing 736 colored males, seven counties employing 240 colored males on road construction, exclusive of 3 at the Hospital for Insane in general work.

Under the intelligent and skillful management of the physician a very gratifying condition of general healthfulness prevails, considering the diseased state of not a few of the prisoners when admitted. The most serious local complaint is dysentery. Many of the prisoners come with venereal diseases. No epidemic has prevailed since the prison was founded, due to the most excellent and well established sanitary provisions. Prisoners are privileged to see the physician at any time and state their ailments, and they range from a sore finger to fevers and prompt attention is accorded. In case of death the remains are sent to friends, if requested; otherwise they are laid away in a well-kept cemetery. There is small mortality considering the condition of some of the prisoners when they arrive, many of the colored being victims of consumption.

The people of Florida do not understand nor appreciate what they have in their State Prison Farm, officially known as Bradford Farms. The minds of some may revolt at the suggestion that they should know of this place set apart to care for men and women who ignorantly or willingly transgress the rules of human society. The inmates of Bradford Farms are human beings—get that fact firmly in your minds. Their presence there does not always mean that all of them should be there. The thought usually associated with a State Prison is that the occupants are desperate characters. That depends: For example a young man is pointed out who is separated from freedom for three years under the charge of “breaking and entering." He pried open the back window of a grocery store and helped himself to a can of sardines and a package of crackers. Here is a young man who has a sentence of two years for passing a small check on a bank in which he had no money. There is a man who forged another man's name to a small check for which he forfeited three years of liberty. There are a good many men and women at the farm for murder in one form or another—the result in most cases of a few minutes of passion. It was their misfortune to be in possession of a deadly weapon at the wrong time. Instead of a blow from a fist, with the ending in bruised faces, a bullet finishes a life, an act frequently regretted at once. For these offenses the sentences range from a few years to life. Disputes leading to murder are often over trifles. These men, as a rule, are not naturally bad, and these victims of circumstances usually constitute the majority of "trusties." There are men at Bradford Farms naturally bad, an incorrigible element, mostly young whites, disposed to defy the rules, and more of them are seen with shackles on their ankles than any other class. It is the exception to see a negro wearing shackles. Most of the negro prisoners are laborers and the worst of the whites are classified as having no trade.

The Public Invited to Visit Bradford Farms.

Bradford Farms prison has already become a notable institution. It is the best prison in the South. It belongs to the people of Florida, and visitors are not only invited but made most welcome by the Superintendent and his associates. Visitors will find an orderly, industrious, and well behaved "citizenship"—under guard it is true—besides they will see what intelligent effort can do in making of grass grow on land that a short time before, was a tract of cut over pine and swamp land, and also see some of the best horses, mules, cows, hogs and chickens, south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers. Voluntary visitors need not go with fear and trembling. They will see little to distress them, the only sad thought in this connection is that the great majority of the law abiding population of a State finds it necessary to provide a place of restraint for the small minority; but those who are there are usually made better by their stay.

AN ACT to Provide for the Location and Establishment of a State Prison Farm, and the Improvement and Maintenance of Same; to Provide for the Custody, Care and Maintenance of the State Convicts; to Authorize and Empower the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions to Work and Employ Certain of Said Convicts in Improving and Maintaining Said State Prison Farm; to Lease Certain of Said Convicts and to Work and Employ Certain of Said Convicts Upon the Public Roads of the State, and for Other Purposes, and to Provide Penalties for the Violations Thereof.

Be It Enacted by the Legislature of the State of Florida:

Section 1. That a State Prison Farm be and is hereby established on the lands now owned by the State of Florida in Bradford County, Florida; and the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall improve said Farm for the purpose of the care and maintenance of the women and infirm male convicts and all convicts classed as Hospital Subjects, and such other convicts as said Board may from time to time place on said State Prison Farm. The Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall immediately, after this Act shall go into effect, proceed to improve the said State Prison Farm by having all necessary buildings erected, furnished and equipped to receive such convicts as are required by this Act to be cared for on said State Prison Farm.

Sec. 2. That for the purpose of providing the necessary funds to carry out the provisions as directed in Section 1 of this Act, there be and is hereby appropriated from the amounts which shall be received by the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions from the hire of State convicts under the present lease the following sums, to-wit: Thirty-five Thousand ($35,000.00) Dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the advance payment for the quarter beginning April the first, 1913; Twenty Thousand ($20,000.00) Dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the advance payment of the quarter beginning July the first, 1913; and Twenty Thousand ($20,000.00) Dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the advance payment for the last quarter of 1913.

Sec. 3. That on or before the first day of July, 1913, the State Prison Physician shall examine and grade all of the State convicts who on said date are in the State Prison, and shall divide the said convicts into two grades or classes, to-wit: Grade or Class One, which shall consist of all able-bodied convicts; Grade or Class Two, which shall consist of women, infirm male convicts, and all convicts classed as hospital subjects.

Sec. 4. All convicts graded or classed as Grade Two, shall, on the first day of January, 1914, or as soon as possible thereafter, be placed on the said State Prison Farm in Bradford County, Florida, to be used on the said State Prison Farm as the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions may direct; and the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall employ the necessary superintendent, wardens, guards and physicians to conduct said State Prison Farm, and shall purchase all the necessary stock, implements and material to be used on said Farm for the operation thereof.

Sec. 5. That on or before the 15th day of August, 1913, the County Commissioners of counties desiring to use and work State convicts upon the public roads of said counties shall apply to the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions for any number of State convicts the said county may desire to use for working its public roads; and said Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall set apart the number of State convicts required by such county or counties from the Class or Grade One, as classified in Section 3 of this Act; and such county or counties using and working State convicts upon the public roads shall guard, clothe, feed, maintain and give medical attention to all convicts in the county or counties' care at the expense of said county or counties; and shall at all times be under the supervision of the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions, and shall comply with all rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of Agriculture and the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions. The county or counties working and using State convicts upon the public roads, as provided in this Act, shall pay to the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions the sum of $10.00 each per month.

Sec. 6. All convicts as classified as Class or Grade One in Section 3 of this Act that are not set apart to counties, as provided in Section 5 of this Act, shall be leased by the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions to private lessees on or before the first day of January, A. D. 1914, and said lease shall be made to run for the term not to exceed two years from January first, 1914, and all leases made by the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall be directly to the lessees, who shall use said convicts, and said convicts shall not be subleased by said lessees.

Sec. 7. The Board of Commissioners of State Institutions be and is hereby authorized to prescribe such conditions and require such bonds as in the discretion of said Board may be necessary in the leasing of said convicts to private lessees or in setting apart convicts to counties as provided in this Act.

Sec. 8. All State convicts delivered by State authorities after the first day of January, 1914, to the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall be carried to the State Prison Farm in Bradford County, Florida, and there classified by the Prison Physician as provided in Section 3 of this Act; and all State convicts who shall come within Class or Grade One, as provided hereinbefore, shall be used on said State Prison Farm, or may be delivered to lessees, or to Counties working State convicts on its roads, to replace State convicts whose sentence may have expired, or who may become hospital subjects.

Sec. 9. That all prison officers and guards employed under the provisions of this Act shall have authority to hold, retain, guard, work and keep in custody all State convicts placed in their care.

Sec. 10. The Commissioners of Agriculture and Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall have supervision of all State convicts provided for under the provisions of this Act, and shall prescribe all rules and regulations, and do any and all things necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act.

Sec. 11. For the purpose of maintaining the State Prison Farm in Bradford County, Florida, the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions shall retain from the last payment of the present lease the sum of Thirty-five Thousand ($35,000.00) Dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, and from the proceeds of the hire of State convicts for the year 1914 the sum of Sixty Thousand ($60,000.00) Dollars; and for the year of 1915, and each year thereafter, until the said lease executed on January first, 1914, shall expire, the sum of Seventy-five Thousand ($75,000.00) Dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be used by said Board of Commissioners of State Institutions for the support and maintenance of the said State Prison Farm, and which amounts are hereby appropriated for that purpose.

Sec. 12. Any State convict who may be placed on the State Prison Farm, or let to counties or to private lessees, shall be considered and deemed to be in the State Prison.

Sec. 13. THE CONVICTS PITIABLE CONDITION WHEN RELEASED.

It is no wonder that many convicts leave the prison sullen in temper and with a grudge against the world. It is a known fact that many have been broken down in health, caused from unsanitary surroundings or from overwork, and when discharged they have no money in their pockets and are poorly clad, "they must either lie and probably be caught in the lie, or face the fact that ninety-nine times out of a hundred the prospective employer, even if he had a job to offer, will not trust it to an ex-convict."

It is pitiable indeed that these unfortunates leave the institutions, in many instances, worse criminals than when they entered and from causes that should not exist in this day of our boasted civilization.

6—Pr.

FLORIDA HOPE HALL AND INDUSTRIAL FARM FOR RELEASED PRISONERS.

Supplemental to Bradford Farms, the Volunteers of America, under the direction of Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, known the world over for her work in prison reform, has through her Southern representatives, Lt. Col. F. C. Begley, and Adjutant and Mrs. L. A. Odom, purchased 160 acres of land at Hampton, in Bradford County, within convenient distance of Bradford Farms, for the purpose of conducting an Industrial Farm and Home for released prisoners, modeled after similar institutions in other states established under the direction of Mrs. Booth.

The managers of this Florida Hope Hall have issued a booklet descriptive of the work they have in hand, and uses as a motto the statement that "the State cannot afford to dispense with the economic value of a single citizen." This document is sent free to any address by Adjutant Odom at Hampton.

In this connection a letter of endorsement, appearing in this booklet, is herewith produced:

"I most cordially endorse to the good people of Florida and elsewhere, the work inaugurated at Hampton, in our State, under the direction of Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth, whose zeal, activity and success in connection with prison reform is world wide. I have long known of her beneficent work, and from personal knowledge and acquaintance with Adjutant L. A. Odom, who ably and intelligently represents her here, I feel sure that the work in hand at Hampton can be made important and helpful to a most needed class, if given proper encouragement and support.

The citizens of Florida have never failed to take lively interest in any movement which promises to ameliorate the condition of the unfortunate and wayward. I only need to mention the care given to the blind and deaf, the insane, and for misguided youths—as seen in the Industrial School for Boys, and the one for girls recently established—not to speak of well directed efforts to guard the health of our people, and of other beneficent movements inaugurated by our various Legislatures.

There is goodness too, in the work of the Volunteers of America in creating a more enlightened and Christian sentiment in the treatment of discharged prisoners. The chief purpose of the prison is the protection of society and the reformation of the prisoner. The success of the second object conduces to the accomplishment of the first.

It is hard enough to travel the straight path even with a good reputation to begin with. How much harder when one starts off anew in the struggle of life when over the man is spread the mantle of a prison reputation. The avenues to honest endeavor are too often filled with obstructions, but unfortunately the gates to the avenues of vice are open—the doors of the saloon and of other objectionable haunts swing temptingly wide, but Florida is putting up barriers as fast as possible in this respect. No password is necessary at places of disrepute. Is it to be wondered at that ex-prisoners return to their old courses when society fails in its duty? Charity is a beautiful virtue, under all circumstances, but when it throws the mantle of forgetfulness and forgiveness over the past of the wrong doer, credits him with sincerity to do better, and assists him in carrying out his intentions and desires, it becomes nobility. This done in all fulness, a mighty service has been rendered to the man with a clouded reputation and to society itself.

The Volunteers of America tell of their plans in the pages of the little booklet of which this is a part, and we bespeak for it a careful reading and favorable response in making Hope Hall what is hoped. As Governor Trammell well says: "I heartily commend its promoters for their efforts along such humane lines."

W. A. McRAE,

Commissioner of Agriculture.

Tallahassee, Florida, December 5th, 1916."

A RECOMMENDATION.

The Governor and his Cabinet constitute the Board of Commissioners of State Institutions. The Board has direct control and supervision of the State Prison (officially known as Bradford Farms, at Raiford, in Bradford county; the Hospital for the Insane, at Chattahoochee, Gadsden county; the Industrial School for Boys, at Marianna, Jackson county, and the Industrial School for Girls, at Ocala, Marion county.

On account of the many and varied duties demanding the attention and thought of the Governor and Cabinet, often interfering with the time necessary to give careful supervision to these reformatory institutions, I would recommend the following:

That the Legislature, at its next session, which convenes on April 3, 1917, provide for a "Board of Control of State Reformatories," the said Board to have direct control and supervision of Bradford Farms, the Hospital for the Insane, the Industrial School for Boys, and the Industrial School for Girls.

These institutions had a combined population on January 1, 1917, of 3,359 persons, adults and youths, and many require constant care and watchfulness. Each year finds an increase in the number of the deficient class.

My recommendations are based on the following grounds:

1. It would insure better management.
2. It would insure closer co-operation.
3. It would place all the work under one management.
4. It would mean economy in the end.
5. It would mean ability to place responsibility.
6. It would mean regular supervision instead of "call on demand."

This Board of Control, if created, would, under the Constitution, be subordinate to the Commissioner of Agriculture and the Board of State Institutions.
